Frequently Asked
QuestionsWhy doesn't my invoice match what I see in Campaign Manager?

Your invoice is the definitive source for your campaign charges. It includes any adjustments, promotions, taxes and other fees. Please note that it can take up to 72 hours to complete traffic validation, and delayed data can result in charges or corrections being included on a subsequent invoice; this may result in a difference in the amount you see on an invoice and the amount you see in the campaign manager for a particular date range.

How is my invoice amount calculated?

Invoices are issued based on clicks generated during your billing cycle. Your billing cycle is determined by the payment method you have selected. Your invoice includes all applicable charges, credits, and promotions. Charges for campaigns running in multiple countries will show up on separate invoices.

Campaigns are paused but I am still being charged?

If you have paused your campaigns, please note that spend can accrue for up to 72 hours for clicks generated while the campaign was still active and are within the billable period or clicks that are reported late. For details on how to verify campaign delivery and spends during the Invoice Period, please visit the Help page (<https://advertising.amazon.com/help>) then navigate to the Billing and Payments section to troubleshoot your invoice.

Where can I find more details regarding my billing and payment status?

Please visit the Billing and Payments section within your Amazon Advertising account to learn more about your invoice and payment history, update your payment method, and learn about promotions. You can also visit billing help page (<https://advertising.amazon.com/help>) for information regarding your charges.

What does Cost of Advertising on Seller Central mean?

On Seller Central, Cost of Advertising provides you with a summary of the amount you are charged for your Amazon Advertising account and can include one or more invoices depending on the date range you selected.

How is my invoice period determined?

Your invoice period is based on the time of the occurrence of the clicks and/or impressions, as well as your chosen payment method. Please note that network delays can sometimes affect the recording of these events, which could result in a slight shift in your invoice period. Your invoice serves as the final and official source of information regarding your invoice period.
